would stay inside Fort Driant this time. They were thrown back in their first attack last week after fighting across a moat guarding the fort.

Metz, which never has been taken by storm in all its war-torn history, stands between Patton's forces and the Saar basin of Germany 50 miles to the east.

Capture of the elaborate fort would open the way for an assault on Metz itself, strongest fortress city in western Europe. The attack on Driant, whose thick walls stood almost intact under heavy preliminary bombing and artillery fire, was delivered head-on by tanks and infantry who just kept going until they smashed through.

There were losses of American men and tanks, but information reaching headquarters said they were considerably lighter than were to be expected in storming one of the main fortresses of the German defensive system.

Dunkirk Doomed
A 48-hour truce stilled the roar of cannon at historic Dunkirk, last channel port to which a German garrison clung, while 20,000 refugees streamed out of the town into the safe countryside.

British and Canadian troops there waited impatiently to storm in. The assault was to be resumed at 6 a. m. Friday, and it was doubted the 15,000 Nazis inside the port would put up much more than a token fight before surrendering.

By far, the most critical importance was attached to the First Army's smash toward Cologne and Dusseldorf. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Germany's mobilization director, was reported by the German news agency DNB to have rushed to the west and implored the war-weary people to give the last ounce of effort.

Although the weather did not clear sufficiently to give the attacking American troops an elaborate aerial cover, dive-bombers assisted in breaking up enemy counterattacks.

Lt. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's British Second Army beat off a small-scale Nazi counter thrust north of Nijmegen in the only sharp fighting reported from the northern Holland front. British troops pushed three miles east from Turnhout in Belgium and U. S. airborne troops advanced along the north bank of the Maas (Meuse) river to the town of Middleaar, near the edge of the Reichswald forest south of Cleve.

British, Polish and Canadian forces registered numerous small gains in western Holland and Belgium. A field dispatch estimated that 50,000 German troops remain on the Dutch islands and in the area south of the Maas and west of the British Second Army in the Holland corridor. There were signs of a general enemy withdrawal from the low countries.

Officers Elected By Highland Club

Hazen Hengesh was elected president of the Highland Golf club last night to succeed C. E. Johnson. Merton Jensen was re-elected vice president, G. M. Stade was re-elected secretary and Neil Jensen was re-elected treasurer.

Directors named were: Merton Jensen, C. E. Johnson and Stan Ostman, all for a term of three years.

The meeting was held at the clubhouse with George Walter presiding in the absence of President Johnson and Vice President Merton Jensen.

HAY FEVERITES OBTAIN RELIEF

Pollen Extract Injected To Give Immunity From Allergy

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor
New York.—The Associated Press story early in August that the two authors of the book, "Know Your Hay Fever," were leaving town to escape the pollen themselves was only half correct.

One of the authors, A. B. Berresford, M. D., of New York, does not leave during hay fever pollen season because he is able to immunize himself.

The other author, A. P. Sperling, Ph. D., goes away to escape hay fever, for as the book says, avoidance of the trouble maker is the best treatment, for those fortunate enough to be able to get away.

Some Use Filters
Dr. Berresford in a chapter on diagnosis and treatment tells of all the hay fever remedies and how much or little good they usually do.

He says a person with mild hay fever may get along quite well by using one of the filters which fits in the nose to bar pollens or by an air filter in the house or even in a single room.

He is unable to obtain complete avoidance by going to a resort, he should be immunized. Most people come under this classification.

Immunization, he says, started about 30 years ago with Dr. Noon of London. It consists in injecting under the skin very minute amounts of an extract of the offending pollen in successive and gradually increasing dosage. Since Noon's day many refinements have been made, rendering the outcome much more certain of success.

"However, even today," Dr. Berresford writes, "there are failures and it is the exceptional rather than the usual case that obtains one hundred per cent relief. In most cases, though, the results are so good that the patients are well satisfied."

Important for the victim to remember is that the treatment of hay fever is a highly individual matter and that it is impossible to follow any set scheme of treatment that will apply to all cases.

No Lifelong Immunity
In general there are three methods: immunizing doses for about ten weeks before the pollen season, treatment during the pollen season, or, finally, taking the immunizing treatment the year round.

"This," says the author referring to the last way, "is the per-

Finns Keep Up Good Work Chasing Nazis Out Of The Country

Stockholm, Oct. 4 (AP)—Finnish troops fighting against stiff German resistance are closing in on Kemi, strong German-held port on the Gulf of Bothnia, a Helsinki communique announced today.

The communique said that Finnish troops, pressing their campaign to disarm and intern Germans in Finland in accordance with the terms of their armistice with Russia, had crossed the Sino river, 20 miles south of the town, and advanced about "half-way to Kemi."

North of the port, Finnish troops, which Sunday drove the Nazi garrison out of Tornio, 20 miles northwest of Kemi, beat off German counterattacks and destroyed three Nazi tanks. The Helsinki dispatch said Finnish fighter planes shot down two German Stukas which dive-bombed troops in Tornio yesterday.

Swedish newspaper reports said the town was bombed again today with large fires started.

Survivors, in addition to his wife, are a brother, Charles, in California; two sisters, Sarah, California, and Mrs. M. J. Fenlon of Jordantown, Texas.

her job in the upper grade room. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wagoner left this week for Ohio after spending sixteen months in Curtis.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Fader, who spent last week visiting with the H. Emerys left for Sault Ste. Marie where Mrs. Fader will enter the War Memorial hospital for a major operation.

Warsaw Falls Again

THE tragic end of Gen. Bor's ill-fated Polish patriot army in Warsaw which surrendered to the Germans after 63 days of fighting for the liberation of the Polish capital adds one more chapter to the story of grief, misery and sacrifices that war has visited upon the people of Poland.

The gallant but ill-fated uprising of the Polish nationals within Warsaw has served only to destroy the city and further reduce the capacity of that war-torn nation to rebuild when the fighting ceases in Europe.

Obviously the uprising in Warsaw was premature and was started without direction from the Red armies hammering at the gates of the city. Russia contended at the start of the patriots' uprising that the revolt was ill-timed and was made without proper coordination with the Red armies attacking outside the city. Thus the revolt, though noble in purpose and gallant in its execution, served only to widen the rift between Russia, the Soviet-sponsored Polish National Committee of Liberation and the Polish government in exile in London.

The Poles' fervent desire to rid their capital and their country of the Nazi beasts and the Polish patriots' willingness to fight for their liberation is understandable. Modern warfare, however, is a highly complex business and skillful coordination is essential for success.

The tragedy of the Warsaw uprising serves to accentuate the skill with which Gen. Eisenhower averted a similar misstep in the battle of France. French patriots were constantly exhorted by the Allied supreme command to make no abortive revolt and to save their forces until the signal was given at a time when the success of their uprising was certain. The French, working in close collaboration with the Allies, took heed of these warnings and thereby escaped the predicament that befell the patriots of Warsaw.

Pledge to Veterans

THE obligations that the state of Michigan owes to the returning war veterans will be completely fulfilled if Governor Kelly's program, as outlined at the meeting here Tuesday night, is carried out.

A wounded veteran of World War I, Governor Kelly fully appreciates the many problems that will face the service men when they return to peacetime living. During the past two years, the state's chief executive has shown his deep interest in the welfare of the men who are now serving with the armed forces. At his insistence, the Michigan legislature enacted a soldier vote law, which was a model for other states to follow later. During his administration, a special Veterans' Reserve Fund of $1,000,000 was set up to assure hospitalization and medical aid to returning soldiers; an adult education program was instituted; and the Office of Veterans' Affairs was created to coordinate the various programs designed to assist the needy.

GI-Joe has a true friend in Gov. Harry F. Kelly. If the federal government should fall in its responsibilities to our war veterans the state of Michigan will see to it that they do not suffer from neglect.

Picayunish Issues

UNABLE to find any real issues on which to attack Governor Kelly's administration, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, Edward J. Fry, in his speech at Saginaw, dealt with such trifling matters as the defeat of Lt.-Gov. Eugene C. Keyes in the recent Republican primary.

During his service as lieutenant-governor, Mr. Keyes was primarily interested in building up Mr. Keyes, either for the governorship or some higher office. He even had intended to oppose Governor Kelly for a second term despite the fact that the latter has achieved one of the finest records of any chief executive in Michigan's history. But Mr. Keyes made little contribution to this record as lieutenant governor and as a member of the state administrative board. He was an obstructionist and self-seeker, and it is just as well that he is out of the political picture. The Democratic gubernatorial candidate is trying to make capital of the purging of Keyes by the Republicans, but it will make little impression upon those who can easily recall that the New Dealers themselves have purged two vice presidents in recent years.

Tourist "Air Courts"

AFTER the war many tourists will travel to Upper Michigan in commercial and private airplanes, according to a prediction made by Edward Hartung of Detroit, pioneer aviation leader, in a talk at the recent meeting of the Michigan Outdoor Writers association.

To keep pace with this development Hartung points to the need of establishing an extensive system of airports and landing strips along highways in the resort region. Such a plan will be carried out by tourist-minded Canada, and Hartung urges that Michigan should not lag behind.

Commercial airlines are now thinking of the postwar operation of flights from metropolitan centers to the Porcupine Mountains, Mackinac Island and other vacation centers. All this may sound like figments of the imagination to us nowadays, but so did radio, television and other modern inventions seem queer to others some decades ago.

Today there are some 3,000 airports in the United States, and the Civil Aeronautics Administration is recommending an additional 3,000, with major improvements for 1,600 existing fields. These figures emphasize the general scope of the great aviation development being witnessed in this country. The rapid expansion of the aeronautical industry for wartime purposes augurs a radical advance in commercial aviation in the postwar period.

It's Nov. 23

EVER since President Roosevelt messed up the traditional schedule for the observance of Thanksgiving day in this country, there has been much confusion in the public mind about this holiday date.

Michigan's observance has been proclaimed for the usual fourth Thursday of November, which this year falls on the 23rd, but a few states will wait until Nov. 30, Texas and Georgia, however, will make certain to fully observe the holiday by celebrating it twice.

In Michigan, the state law permits the governor or the president to set the date. Governor Kelly has decided that Nov. 23 should be set aside for the observance of Thanksgiving day, and there will be no further change. This is one precedent that will not be broken this time.

Other Editorial Comments

WILLIAM H. SCHACHT
(Houghton Mining Gazette)

William H. Schacht, whose unexpected passing Friday night is deeply regretted by a wide circle of friends, was a mining executive with broad vision and determination, active and aggressive in the advancement of his company's varied interests and in the promotion of public welfare in the district. He was a busy, conscientious man, an indefatigable worker who got things done and who inspired those associated with him.

With keen executive, technical and practical ability, and a personality that was dynamic in attacking problems at hand, he lived a life of great usefulness. His worth as an engineer and his qualities of leadership were recognized and the esteem in which he was held was widespread.

Mr. Schacht was a builder whose accomplishments in the mining, milling and power fields were outstanding. In the midst of his busy, industrial life, he found time for community and county affairs. In the development of the Adams township educational system he was accorded full credit for notable improvements, embracing the construction of a gymnasium and swimming pool at the high school; also in the building up of the county road system he was a forward-looking member of the road commission.

Mr. Schacht has left his marks deeply in his company's progress and in the advancement of the district. For distinguished achievement he was fittingly recognized by his alma mater, the Michigan College of Mining and Technology, which conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Engineering. His long practical experience and success in the copper mining industry were duly recognized in his appointment by two state administrations to the Board of Control of the college. His zeal in fostering educational progress, on both secondary and advanced levels, was shown in many ways.

Mr. Schacht's career was marked by efficiency and far-sightedness in the physical expansion of the Copper Range company and in its ventures into the power and fabricating fields. And, in improvement of methods, he had a number of valuable innovations to his credit, all leading to a lowering of production costs. He was among the first to appreciate the importance of the development of cheap electric power for the mines of the district. The Copper Country has indeed lost a good citizen and one of its most ardent champions. Mr. Schacht's interests were sovaried, and the results of his activities so noteworthy, that all of us realize that a real, constructive force has passed with his death.

Q. I have been corrected for saying, "I don't think so." My friend says, "But you do think, or you couldn't express an opinion about it." Must I hang my head in shame?

A. No; keep your chin up. It is a mistake to think that good English must always be logical. The expression, "I don't think so," is an idiom that is used constantly by millions of educated Americans. It is simply another way of saying, "I do not so think."

We must not forget that the adverb "so" refers to what has just been said, thought, or proposed. Surely, no one can object to the expression, "I think so." Therefore, if one may "think so," one may also "not think so."

World Events Analyzed

BY LESLIE BAIN

Between the lines of Winston Churchill's recent speech before the House lurk the ghosts of this war; gnawing uncertainty and fear of misunderstanding. His urging of a three-power meeting with Russia, for as he put it, "without far closer and more searching discussions" no final policies can be shaped sounded too much like a bell buoy, warning of rock shores. And indeed perilous are the waters in which we are navigating.

Paradoxically, there are no major differences between America, Britain and Russia, yet the atmosphere is so charged with suspicion that none of them dares to approach the others with exact proposals. The result is confusion in Italy, France, Yugoslavia, Romania, Bulgaria, Finland and Poland. Since each virtuously disclaims political ambition and leans backwards to prove it and since the three have not shaped joint policies, burning problems and issues are drifting in a vacuum, heading toward—what? Either a grand get-together or a parting of the ways.

Baldly put, it appears that Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin are so afraid to make a wrong move, which may be interpreted as hostile, that they are not making any. Roosevelt, running for re-election, is an especially vulnerable position. Anything he might do or say may be translated into a political weapon. Should he get along with Stalin, the cry would arise that he is selling out to Russia; a friendly understanding with Britain would immediately be exploited as another sign of his subservience to Churchill. American good offices in bringing hostile factions in foreign lands together would produce the accusation that the President wants to become a world-dictator.

Churchill sallied forth a few times and ended up by scolding his fingers in the many hot waters into which he got himself. Besides, he is very much aware of how fragile the political structure of the United Nations really is.

Stalin's position is equally delicate. He could hardly make a move which would not be interpreted either as Russian expansion or a nefarious plot to hoodwink the Allies. Stalin is a realist, he wants peace and he is not going to jeopardize it by taking too much upon himself come what may.

In theory the Allies are one in their desire to build a strong peace, to exact retribution from the Germans and the Japanese and to arrange a fair and just distribution of the wealth of the earth. But that is as far as they have gotten. In practice none of these problems have been approached except in the vaguest terms. Moscow, Cairo and Teheran were a beginning and the world hoped that at long last the period of indecision was over and the Allies would create a political council to deal with the million and one problems of a lasting peace.

While Teheran did produce an agreement on military matters, troublesome issues were glossed over and tabled for future consideration. Now, as the European phase of the war is nearing its end the time has come for Britain, Russia and the United States to face the problems. Within six months the major powers will have to go on record concerning the political, social and economic future of the continent, but each is waiting for the other to make the first move.

Churchill must have felt keenly the need of a thorough searching of minds lest the present drifting extend beyond the collapse of Germany and find the Allies as ill prepared for peace as they were for war. There is no denying any longer that this is a political war and to win it means more than defeating the enemy on the battlefields.

It would be nothing less than a tragedy to permit the bitterness, hatred, prejudice and suspicion of the past to delay the free and frank airing of the issues any longer. Surely, we have paid a high enough price for listening to the voices of dissension and for our groundless suspicions. Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin owe it to history to rise above their fears and carry out the mandate of the millions who have risked and given their all that man may live in peace and dignity.

nation presently has 3,086 airports." Am I right in believing that "presently" is used incorrectly?

A. Right as rain. Presently does not mean "at the present moment." It means "soon; in a little while," as, "I shall be ready presently." Correct: The nation now has 3,086 airports.

Q. You recently said, "In the above list of words . . ." Should you not have said, "In the above listed words?"

A. Tweedledum, Tweedledee . . . Above, as an adjective, is quite correct in both sentences. Indeed, Merriam-Webster's even sanctions above as a noun: "That which is (written, mentioned, or the like) above; as the above shows a loss."

EINDHOVEN, junction city of southwest Holland. Rhyme the third syllable with "kind, find." Say: IND-hoe-ven.

ARNHEM, Dutch city northeast of Nijmegen. Caution. The second syllable is not "heim." Say: AHN-chen.

S'HERTOGENBOSCH, city southwest of Nijmegen. The "s" has the trisyllabic (ch) sound as in "ach." Say: s'chait-TOE-(ch)-en-boss.

PRUM, river and town of western Germany near Luxembourg. The "u" (umlaut) is a blend of "oo" and "ee," as represented by the Colby symbol: (e). Say: pr(e)um.

COPENHAGEN, capital of Denmark. Caution. The third syllable is not "hoe." "Copenhagen" is the English form of the Danish "Kobenhavn," and it should be pronounced with a long "a." Say: KOE-pen-HAY-gen.

EPINAY-LEZ, junction point south of Nancy. Accent the third syllable which rhymes approximately with "gal, pal." Say: ay-pec-NAL.

Good Morning!

—By The Bugler

SLIGHT MISTAKE—This evening at the Coliseum men and women of Escanaba will gather to play-host and hostess and help entertain visiting teachers at a teachers ball, one of the social events of the Michigan Education Association.

These visiting teachers, coming from all parts of the Upper Peninsula and include both women and men.

What was planned to be, and will be, a very enjoyable affair stirred up a hornets nest in at least one quarter of Escanaba—all because of H. C. "Hal" Gerletti's inability to identify the voice of a friend over the telephone. Hal is chairman of the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce dance committee, which is arranging the dancing party tonight at the Coliseum.

It started a few days before the dance, after letters had been sent out addressed to members of the Chamber of Commerce, urging them to "come out and help entertain the teachers—make them feel the warmth of real old-fashioned Escanaba hospitality." A woman telephoned Hal to inquire whether the invitation included wives, as well as husbands. Thinking he recognized the voice as that of a good friend, Hal joked:

"Wives? I should say not. Can't you let that old man of yours out nights once in awhile to have a good time?" There was a furious gasp at the other end—"and then she practically threw the 'phone at me," says Hal ruefully. He didn't know who the wife was, and perhaps no amount of explanation would have helped much anyway.

UNBELIEVING—The next day the Bugler received a telephone call from a lady (presumably the same one who had hung up on Hal Gerletti) who informed the Bugler that "you wrote something about the wives of men in service conducting themselves properly—well, how about the husbands right here in Escanaba?"

Further questioning developed that the lady's husband had received one of those Chamber of Commerce letters. She had telephoned Gerletti—

"Do they ask the wives? No! I feel terribly insulted and so do all the women in our group. They never even addressed the letters to Mr. and Mrs. — just to my husband."

Efforts to explain that it must be a mistake brought the answer: "You'll have a hard time covering up something like this. Even my husband is insulted. We're not the kind of people who do such things."

IT'S A FORM LETTER—It is said that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned. This is no attempt to "cover up" anything. It's simply the presentation of a rather amusing misunderstanding which, allowed to go uncorrected, might make some folks think the Chamber of Commerce was doing more than expected in boosting Escanaba's famous record for hospitality.

To reassure everyone, if reassurance is necessary, it might be well to explain that the letter sent out by the Chamber of Commerce is a form letter kept on file for such events. It was composed by Harold Lindsay years ago when he was Chamber of Commerce secretary. When such a letter is in order it is taken from the file, the dates and names changed to fit the occasion and reissued.

Letters exactly similar have been mailed out at least three times before—and caused not so much as a ripple on the local domestic waters. Therefore the present contretemps was entirely due to the case of mistaken identity over the telephone.

Into the Past

10 Years Ago—1934

Construction will start next week on the first of several potato warehouses in Delta county as emergency relief projects. The first will be at the West Gladstone crossing. Another at Ford River switch awaits settling of details on title to the site.

That a generation of conservation conscious people must be developed through education of children in the school, was the opinion expressed by E. E. Gallup, Lansing state supervisor of agricultural education, in an address at a sectional meeting of the M. E. A. convention.

Gladstone—The H. W. Blackwell Hardware store was broken into last night and merchandise valued at $150 was carted away. An attempt was made the same evening to force entrance to the Behlin drug store.

20 Years Ago—1924

The New York Giants won the first game of the world series to date, defeating Washington 4 to 3 in 12 innings, after the Senators had staged a rally in the ninth and tied the score.

Manistique—Unless trade conditions change, it is not considered likely that the Manistique plant of the Charcoal Iron Company will resume operations before spring. Demand for iron, it was said, was not sufficient to open the local plant at this time. The Rev. John B. Hubbard, who recently accepted the call to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church, arrived in Escanaba yesterday, and will take charge of the work of the congregation.

25 Years Ago—1919

Gary, Ind.—Serious rioting broke out late today when thousands of striking steel workers and others hurled bricks and stones and fought police. Troops were ordered out to take charge of the city.

Escanaba had a strong football team, and on Saturday displayed championship caliber when it defeated Neagunee 59 to 0.

Escanaba Woman's club was placing tickets on sale throughout the city for a chautauqua appearance here of Dr. Preston Bradley on Oct. 8. Dr. Bradley's subject was "The World in the Making."

WE ARE HOSPITABLE — As host to the Seventh Region M. E. A. convention Escanaba people are doing everything they can to make the visit of the teachers comfortable and enjoyable. Homes have been opened to them to provide sufficient room accommodations; cars are being made available in the required number to meet the incoming train, and to transport the teachers from one function to another in the city.

All of this is being done because the city and its people are genuinely pleased that Escanaba has been chosen as the convention place. School teachers are, by the very character of their profession and training, among the most moral elements of any community. Escanaba has been host to other conventions and other groups in the past and they have always been received hospitably, treated well, entertained to the best ability of those responsible for such events.

The teachers ball to be held tonight at the Coliseum is simply an entertainment event to which the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce hopes the people of Escanaba will come "to meet and greet the teachers," and help entertain them.

The Chamber of Commerce letters were simply a measure of insurance against not having enough local citizens at hand to do this. Certainly there will be none who will disagree with the closing sentence of that letter:

"We want the teachers to remember the 1944 convention at Escanaba as one of the finest they have ever attended."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

(Lt. Col. Robert S. Allen now on active service with the Army)

Lowville, N. Y.—High-up Republicans aren't saying anything about it, but they are sore as blazes at one of the staunchest party members, Albert Lasker, for deserting to Roosevelt.

Lasker, former head of one of the top advertising firms in the United States, was one of the managers of Warren Harding's campaign in 1920 and, as a reward, was made chairman of the Shipping Board. He has been one of the inside advisers in the Republican Party councils almost ever since, and three times voted against Roosevelt. This time, however, he says he will vote for Roosevelt.

Alice Roosevelt Longworth, one of his old friends in the Harding administration, has argued with him. So Mrs. Ogden Reid, vice president of the Republican New York Herald Tribune. They have called him a "traitor" and all sorts of things. But Lasker has stood pat. He says there are a lot of things that smell bad about the Roosevelt administration, and sometimes he has to hold his nose.

"In fact," says Lasker, "it's a choice between holding your nose with Roosevelt or closing your eyes to Dewey. But," he concludes, "I've never walked over a cliff holding my nose."

—JAPS MOVE TO CHINA—

It is no longer a military secret that the war in the Central Pacific is five to six months ahead of schedule. Guam and Saipan were not supposed to be taken until sometime next year. Also the bombing of the Philippines is several months ahead of the time table.

However, along with this good news are some distressing facts about China, which nobody wants to shout about.

One is that the Japs are transporting more and more machinery to China and digging in there for a long war. Apparently they figure that the Japanese homeland is in for steady bombing and eventual occupation, so they are transferring things to the mainland of China.

China, they know better than almost anyone else, is a quagmire when any outside country tries to invade it, so it might take years for the British, American and Russian armies to root the Japs out, provided they themselves can get sufficiently entrenched.

Another discouraging factor is that we have engaged only a small part of the Jap Army in the South Pacific, leaving untouched vast reserves which the Japs have been keeping at home and in China. Finally, Chiang Kai-shek's prestige is increasingly on the wane inside China. He has been the chief exponent of cooperation with the U. S. A., but recently his anti-U. S. war lards have been getting the upper hand. We have to face the fact that some of them would even prefer to work with the Japs than have their territory fought over by Allied armies. It doesn't make a happy picture.

NOTE—On the other hand, the Jap fleet has taken so many reverses that they scarcely dare return home.

—YANKEE INGENUITY—

Prime Minister Churchill paid sincere tribute in Parliament to the terrific job of the U. S. Army in landing more than 1,000,000 men since D-day and moving hundreds of millions of tons of guns, food, munitions up from the beaches into the front lines. However, the real inside story of this supply miracle has not yet been told.

The ingenuity of U. S. supply officers in contriving temporary docks staggers civilian imagination.

One way of landing supplies was to drive fully loaded Liberty ships right on to the beaches and deliberately turn them over on their sides, with the sterns extending into the water.

After these Liberty ships were run aground, G. I.'s built platforms on their sides, making simulated temporary piers. Other ships then docked alongside them.

Another impressive device still being used by supply troops are hundreds of hastily constructed railroad barges strung end to end from the beaches out to sea, where they are anchored, making a floating pier.

NOTE—Within two weeks after the Allies captured Cherbourg, that great French port was handling a greater amount of supplies than it did in pre-war times.

—CAPITAL CHAFF—

The Philadelphia Democratic convention of 1936 is remembered by some not merely because it renominated Franklin Roosevelt for a second term, but because a Negro preacher, for the first time in Democratic annals, delivered a convention invocation. While he was praying, Senator Cotton Ed Smith of South Carolina, disgustedly stomped out . . . That Negro preacher, Rev. Marshall Shepard of Philadelphia, has now been made recorder of deeds in the District of Columbia, despite strong Deep South and Republican opposition. Flouting Cotton Ed Smith, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia sent his vote from a sick bed to break the committee tie and help confirm Rev. Shepard . . .

During one vitriolic Senate debate recently, Senator Bennett Clark, Missouri Democrat, stung by constant questions from New Hampshire's Republican Styles Bridges, stormed: "My answer to that, as to any question asked by the Senator from New Hampshire, is no." . . . Rowing with able John McCormack on the House floor, Minnesota's bumptious Rep. Harold Knutson recently said: "The gent—I beg your pardon—the distinguished majority leader."

There are two main answers here at home to Churchill's warning that the war may go into 1945. Buy more War Bonds! Give more blood!

BETHANY CHURCH CALLS PASTOR

Members Send Invitation To Rev. Gustav Lund Of Dalbo, Minn.

The voting members of the Bethany Lutheran church held a special meeting Tuesday evening for the purpose of extending a call to a pastor successor to Dr. C. Albert Lund, who has served the church during the past 38 years and because of failing health found it necessary to submit his resignation some weeks ago.

Result of the meeting Tuesday evening was that Rev. Gustav A. E. Lund of Dalbo, Minn., was tendered a call.

Rev. Lund, a man in his early thirties, was ordained in 1938 and has served his present field since then. He is married and has one infant son.

Rev. Lund was guest pastor at the church last Sunday and the congregation was favorably impressed.

Illinois Likely To Go Republican This Year

BY MARQUIS CHILDS

Chicago—If the Democrats carry any of the states in the corn-belt, it will be due almost entirely to Roosevelt's personal prestige and to the force of the argument that the commander-in-chief must be kept on to finish the war.

Childs

In other words, the president will win in spite of his friends. On that at least, experts, and even politicians when they talk candidly, agree. In the Middle West, whatever organization the Democratic party may have developed, thanks to the rise of the New Deal, has largely withered away.

That is not true, of course, in Chicago. But even here in the domain of Mayor Kelly, the Democratic machine isn't what it used to be—not by a long way.

Pat Nash Missed One important element is missing and that is gray little Pat Nash, who used to do all the spade work quietly, out of sight. Ed Kelly was his partner, his front man, and a handsome, imposing one.

Nash died a year ago, and they say that in the wards back of the tracks you can hear the boys muttering their dissatisfaction with the way things are going—or, rather, not going. Some of Nash's old friends were ignored or passed over by Kelly, and that has not made for good feeling.

The mayor is plagued by all the diseases that success and long tenure in office are heir to. A tempest is raging around his head now over an order of the school board forbidding children to transfer from one school to another. Beneath the surface, that is linked to racial tensions which exist here, and Kelly can make a good argument that the school board had no other choice. Nevertheless, the blame from worried and irate parents falls on him. Kelly scoffs at the idea that this could cost a single Roosevelt vote. Yet it is precisely the kind of issue that touches the average citizen who is likely to punch the head of the ticket, indiscriminately, for something that hasn't the remotest connection with National policy.

When it comes down to whether Kelly can deliver a sufficiently large vote in Chicago to offset the Republican tidal wave expected from downstate, The Republican organization downstate is said to be doing a house-to-house job of registration. With control of the entire state administration, they have patronage and money, in marked contrast to the Democrats, who haven't any organization left to speak of.

Lyons Opposes Lucas The Republicans do have one handicap and that is their candidate for the United States Senate, Richard J. Lyons. From all reports, Lyons is completely dominated by the Chicago Tribune, and the feeling is that Colonel McCormick should be able to get along with the one senator he already has, the Hon. C. Wayland "Curley" Brooks.

Lyons is seeking to oust the Democratic incumbent, Senator Scott W. Lucas, who comes from downstate, where he has considerable popularity. Several downstate Republican papers have come out for him. It is said that Lucas might be returned to Washington even if the president failed to carry Illinois.

Roosevelt's majority in this state last time was approximately 100,000 votes, which compared with his 1936 majority of 750,000. To offset the wave of rampant Republicanism from downstate—aroused as never before, it is reported, by the Hillman-Com-

Warn Against Boys Firing .22 Rifles

Boys whose parents permit them to wander in the outskirts of Escanaba firing .22 caliber rifles "every which way" are going to be checked up on, and if necessary the parents will be ordered to report to conservation department headquarters for questioning, District Supervisor D. H. Raess said yesterday.

The announcement was made after several complaints have been received by Escanaba police and conservation officers against youths firing rifles in woods and fields at the edge of the city.

Yesterday two boys, one 15 and one 17, were taken in custody and returned to their homes by conservation officers in response to complaints.

Boys under 17 years of age must have the written permission of their guardian or parents to obtain a license to carry a gun during the open season on game. They also must be accompanied in the woods by an older person who has a license, and who has been designated by the parent or guardian.

"We do not penalize the boys, but we are going to insist that they and their parents obey the law before the boys are permitted to hunt," Supervisor Raess said.

Large Moose Is Seen Near Rock

Elmer Lepisto, driver of a Rock school bus, yesterday reported to conservation headquarters in Escanaba that he and a bus load of school children saw a large moose north of Rock Friday morning.

District Supervisor D. H. Raess said it was the first report of moose being seen in this area in a year or so. It was being accepted by officers that moose were no longer in this section of the Upper Peninsula.

About 12 years ago over 70 moose were live-trapped on Isle Royale and brought to the Upper Peninsula, where they were released in the Escanaba River tract, the Keweenaw peninsula and near Newberry. The moose have been reported seen here and there since that time, but in decreasing numbers.

STATE IS FIRST IN APPLE JUICE

Successor To Cider Is New National Health Drink

Novi, Mich. — Michigan residents formerly associated with turning autumn leaves and frost in the low lands, but today it's apple juice.

For cider, traditional autumn drink, served with doughnuts around the base burner, has been converted into a crystal clear apple beverage, now on sale in groceries almost everywhere the year-round, Michigan leads the nation in its production.

In modern factories, young women in white aprons bottle the sparkling juice in sterilized glass containers. They offer a sharp contrast to the old fashioned cider mill, distinguished by piles of pumice at the rear, which turned out a delicious but often murky product. It often contained a suggestion of vinegar, especially if kept too long.

Here at Novi plant of the Fruit Sales Agency, a subsidiary of the U. S. Warehouse Co., of Detroit, can be seen the inner workings of the apple juice industry, which is crowding orange and tomato "eye openers" for popularity at the breakfast table.

Grade A apples, and that means no worm holes, bruises, insect strings or misshapen offerings, go by conveyor belt through a devious process of pressing, pasteurization and filtering. The apples—Northern Spies, Delicious, Steele Reds, Jonathans and other table varieties—come from farms within a radius of 150 miles.

This year the Novi plant will distribute more than 1,000,000 quarts. The output was nearly double that figure in 1942 when cans were available, and apple juice in six-ounce tins was gaining popularity as a soda fountain drink and a cocktail mixer. This outlet is lost today because of the problem of refilling bottles.

Still, with a fair apple crop, the plant will press from 75,000 to 100,000 bushels of Michigan fruit, or everything that growers offer in its purchasing range.

Irene Gregory
Is Bride Of Gustave Dahl

Against a background of autumn flowers in St. Anne's church, Irene Gregory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gregory, 610 South Nineteenth street, exchanged vows with Gustave Dahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Dahl of Bark River, Saturday morning at nine o'clock. Rev. Joseph Guertin performed the ceremony.

As the bride approached the altar to the traditional bridal chorus from Lohengrin, she was preceded by a close friend, Miss Jean Bendas who was the maid of honor, her niece, Joan Gregory, who served as flower girl and her nephew, Robert Kolb, the ring bearer.

The bride wore a gown of white satin fashioned with a long train, full length sleeves and a sweetheart neckline of lace. She wore a finger tip length veil and carried a bouquet of roses and baby mums.

Miss Bendas's gown was of pink satin with a chiffon skirt over it. She wore a headband of light blue satin. She also wore a headband of flowers and carried a basket of baby mums, which she strew in the bridal path.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Gregory chose a dress of Navy blue and wore a shoulder corsage of roses and mums. Mrs. Dahl was dressed in a frock of medium blue and she also wore a shoulder corsage of roses and mums.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast for the immediate members of the family was served at Belle's Coffee Shop. The bridal cake and early autumn leaves served as the decorations for the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Dahl left Monday morning for Milwaukee where they have both been employed for the past few years. Mrs. Dahl chose for her going away outfit a dark brown suit with rust accessories.

Parent Education Institute
Wednesday Is Well Attended

The responsibility of teachers and parents in the development of youthful personalities was emphasized throughout the 15th annual parent education institute held in Escanaba Wednesday. Too often, it was pointed out, the failures of the younger generation are due to the failure of adults to take the time to understand and study the problems of their children.

Speakers during the morning and afternoon sessions held in the W. W. Oliver Memorial auditorium, discussed the theme of the institute from different angles.

Opening the speaking program at 10 o'clock, Carl M. Horn, chief of the occupational information and guidance division of the state board of control, spoke concerning the community responsibility to the returning veteran. Emphasizing the necessity of aid to returning veterans, Mr. Horn declared the schools and parents definitely are concerned in the problem.

The matter of veteran rehabilitation is a community responsibility, Mr. Horn remarked, and in the process of fitting the returned soldier into the pattern of civic activity the vocational school should play an important role. He stressed also the importance of need for trained counselors to aid the veterans in adjusting their personalities back to peacetime pursuits.

Comparing the community's responsibility to veterans with its duty to its youths, Mr. Horn stressed three keys to happiness, health, security and recognition, and in detailed explanation of these points, explained how teachers and parents can aid in the proper social growth of the young people.

Personality Is Important
Declaring that today's children are not subjected to enough vocational responsibility, C. E. Erickson, professor of education of Michigan State college, blamed both parents and teachers for lack of "vocational maturity" in our youth.

The speaker emphasized that personality and social development often are more important than ability. Competent trained adults are needed, he said, to help students know their own aptitudes and abilities. Young people too often are influenced by adult opinions that some types of work are more "socially respectable" than others. For that reason, Mr. Erickson explained, many young people starting out vocationally prefer "white collar" positions at less pay to jobs which eventually may provide future security.

Vocational interests, too much neglected in modern education, should be traced from the grades, the speaker advised. Schools should provide a planned series of experiences and basic vocational information and he developed this theme in four points:

1—The student should have an opportunity to know all the types of jobs in his community; 2—He should know about the occupations of his parents; 3—Should have an average view of the 25,000 occupations in the United States; 4—He should get a picture of long-time trends in jobs.

Afternoon Session
During the afternoon meeting a measuring rod for parents was offered in interesting fashion by Mrs. Belle Farley Murray, lecturer in parent education for the University of Michigan. She advised her listeners to learn to be better parents. Too often, she said, we expect children to conform to adult standards of behavior. Too often children are chided for bad behavior when in reality their actions are merely annoying to adults.

Children demand personal attention, Mrs. Murray advised, and parents will do well to take the time to study their offspring and to develop the faculty of enjoying them. In asking parents to take stock of their own behavior to their youngsters, she brought adults face to face with the thought provoking question, "How would you like to be your own little boy or girl?"

T. Luther Purdom, director of the bureau of appointments and occupational information, University of Michigan, developed further the institute theme of adult responsibility to youth when he said that 65 per cent of young people confined to institutions are there because of adult failure.

In discussing what should be known about every child, Mr. Purdom advised parents to know where their children are and with whom they associate; parents should be aware also of youthful problems and should encourage children to come to them for advice.

The speaker outlined the "three fears" as the most important of childhood problems: fear of not living up to parents' expectations, fear of not being accepted socially and fear of failure.

Must Learn to Listen
The ability to listen must be learned by adults, just as children learn to walk and read, declared George E. Carrothers of the University of Michigan, in opening the evening meeting. In learning to listen, the adult must develop a habit of listening so that what is said goes right into the system.

While the listener may not agree or believe what is being said, Mr. Carrothers continued, he should nevertheless learn to listen respectfully. Very often we can learn something by listening to others.

The speaker remarked that few adults know how to listen. Too often they are concerned in planning the expression of their own point of view, and are so busy at that task that they fail to hear what is being said.

"Doing your best today is the golden key that opens tomorrow's larger opportunity" was the theme of an address, "Youth Looks Ahead," delivered by Ira M. Smith, University of Michigan registrar.

Youth, in looking ahead, Mr. Smith stated, must prepare itself physically and mentally. Ability must be developed to think, reason, choose, and to make wise decisions. Youth must live to do something good in the world.

"Good living is difficult," Mr. Smith said, "It means sacrifice, denial and self discipline, but it brings ultimate satisfaction."

As a third point the speaker said youth must follow a guide. More than 300 parents and public school teachers attended the three sessions of the institute.

News From Men In The Service

Pvt. Henry W. Dahm, son of Mrs. Henry Dahm, 1225 Lake Shore Drive, Escanaba, who returned to the United States July 24, has arrived at the Army Ground and Services Forces Redistribution Station in Hot Springs, Arkansas.

One of the installations of the Army Services Forces recently set up by the 8th Service Command, the main function of the Station is to reassign men and women, returned from the fighting fronts to the United States under the rotation program. The reassignments are made after careful interviews with the returnees by specially trained interviewers, many of them overseas veterans themselves, who strive to place the returnees where their combat experiences will give the Army the greatest benefits.

Tech. Sgt. Alvin A. Johnson, 519 Ludington St., Escanaba, is one of 10 Michigan soldiers in the U. S. Army Eighth Air Force to receive the Distinguished Flying Cross, the war department announced today.

First Lt. Donald E. Jensen, Air Corps, returning from five months overseas in the European theater of operations was to arrive on approximately Sept. 29 at Fort Sheridan, Ill., prior to reaching his home at Arnold, Mich., where he will visit his parents.

Fairfield, Calif.—Capt. George A. Rivers has been awarded the army's Good Conduct Medal at the Air Transport Command's Fairfield-Suisun Army Air Base, it has been announced by Lt. Col. Arthur W. Stephenson, commanding officer.

The army award is given to enlisted men as a reward for demonstrated fidelity through "faithful and exact performance of duty, efficiency through capacity to produce desired results, and whose behavior has been such as to deserve emulation."

Recent graduation ceremonies at the Naval Training School (Electric) on the Iowa State College campus, Ames, Iowa, saw Bluejacket Joseph Winters, 24, 331 North 11th Street, Escanaba, Michigan, receive recognition as eligible to qualify for the petty officer rate of electrician's mate third class.

Lt. William J. Ballensinger is visiting the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Ballensinger, 605 So. 14th street, called here by the illness of his mother. Lt. Ballensinger's father who is now employed as a food rationing representative of the OPA in Escanaba, served as a captain in the first World war.

Lt. Ballensinger is stationed with the Engineer Corps on Guadalcanal in the South Pacific. He will spend a week and a half with his parents after which he will visit his wife, the former Viola Daniels, who is residing in Tampa, Florida. Lt. Ballensinger will return to his vacation at the expiration of his leave.
